DETAILED ACTION

Information Disclosure Statement

The cited art cited on PTOL 1449 (the prior art listed under OTHER PRIOR ART) was not considered at this time since is not readily available to the Examiner.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Dyer et al (US 2005/0069394).

Dyer et al disclose in Fig. 3 a hybrid system including:

a current driver (Main DAC) for a transmit signal;

a load resistor (R1) connected to the current driver (Main DAC);

a replica driver (Replica DAC); and a replica resistor (R3) connected between the load resistor (R1) and the replica driver (Replica DAC);

a first point of connection (X) between the replica resistor (R3) and the load resistor (R1) being connected to a transmission path circuit (ZI);

a second point of connection (node between R3, R4) between the replica driver (Replica DAC via R4) and the replica resistor (R3) being connected to a receive side (To Receiver Sampler) as recited in claim 1.

Regarding claim 2: a current ratio between the current driver (Main DAC) and the replica driver (Replica DAC) is inherently seen represented by a complex number (see Exemplary Config. 1 and Exemplary Config. 2). Because the structure of the claims is fully met by Dyer, the recited function will necessarily be inherent in Dyer, as held by the court in In re Best, 195 USPQ 430.

Regarding claim 3: the complex number has a real part and an imagine part, at least one of the real part and the imaginary part being variable (because the structure of the claims is fully met by Dyer, the recited function will necessarily be inherent in Dyer, as held by the court in In re Best, 195 USPQ 430).

Regarding claims 4-5 are similarly rejected as claims 2-3.

Elements R4 or C2 read on a circuit element as recited in claim 6.

The circuit element (C2) is variable as recited in claim 7.

The replica driver comprises a digital filter circuit (is seen as Replica DAC) as recited in claim 8.

Claim 9 is similarly rejected as claim 3.

The current driver and the replica driver are implemented by a DAC of a current output type (Main DAC and Replica DAC) as recited in claim 10.

Regarding claim 11: The replica driver is a digital to analog converter (Replica DAC) connected to a digital filter (inherent seen in Fig. 3).

Claim 12 is similarly rejected as above claim 1: a current driver (Main DAC); a load resistor (R1); a replica driver (Replica DAC); a replica resistor (R3); a first point of connection (X) and a second point of connection (node between R3, R4).

Regarding claim 13: because the structure of the claims is fully met by Dyer, the recited function recited therein will necessarily be inherent in Dyer, as held by the court in In re Best, 195 USPQ 430.
